

Aerial Photography Project

Site description: Date: November 2007

Client: Aerial Photography Online

- Website: www.aerialphotographyonline.co.uk

We were approached by a local photography company to build a one stop resource site for the aerial photography community. As aerial photography is a very specialised form of photography, it is very hard for suppliers and practitioners to find online resources all in one place. Users can advertise or ask for specialist help here.

This is a good example of our content management systems at work. It includes a community forum, events list, gallery and a business index listing system. It also features 'Google Ads' to generate revenue to pay for its running costs. Testimonials: "We had been looking for a solution that could encompass all our needs in one package, Fire Brush had the most flexible system which was demonstrated to us so we could obtain a better understanding. They made several visits to us during the build - superb support, other companies only wanted to communicate via e-mail which during a project of this size held no value. Highly recommended!"
