As we all know, buying and selling a house has become a seriously regulated process. You now need to have a Home Information Pack or HIP and just to add to the fun there is now the addition of an EPC, or Energy Performance Certificate. These certificates are rather like the ones found on normal household appliances.

This is where Cooper Allwood come in to play. They offer a comprehensive service for the seller and as such asked us to build a fresh corporate site with two online application forms. The forms are database driven and so store all the vital and important data within an administration area. All parties are then alerted via email and in text format to a mobile phone.
